Comments on Ascension Day from Bishop Mark & St. Augustine:

The Ascension is likely the least celebrated Principal Feast of the Church. And it seems this lack of attention has been true of the Ascension for a long time. Here's an excerpt from an Ascension Day sermon by Augustine:

"My brothers and sisters, anxiety makes me ask myself why the great solemnity we're celebrating today doesn't draw a greater number of the faithful, and why this happy day fails to make Christians thrill with joy.

Why isn't it a day of feasting and fellowship like Christmas? Christmas gave Jesus Christ our Savior to earth; the Ascension restored him to heaven. At Christmas he deigned to assume our humanity; on the day of his Ascension he manifested his divinity. Christmas bespeaks the grace which springs inexhaustibly from his humility; the Ascension confirms our faith in his adorable Godhead. Christmas presents him coming forth from a virginal womb; the Ascension shows him going to occupy the very throne of God. On Christmas day he comes down to redeem us; at the Ascension he goes up to intercede for us. At Christmas his Father sends him; at the Ascension his Father receives him. (We know, however, that he was never separated from his Father—even when dwelling among us. Though visiting earth, he didn't leave heaven.)"
